The ghost of a dead sister, the threats of anonymous stalker, and an exceptional gift for baking collide in Shannon Grogan's unforgettable YA debut: a thriller that evokes both Pretty Little Liars and classic Lois Duncan.

Winning a prestigious culinary contest could take Kara away from the misery that has become her life since her sister's drowning. But as a series of baffling and anonymous threats grows more ominous, Kara is forced not only to recognize the danger to her own life, but also to confront the truth about her sister's—and her own—tangled pasts.

Yes, this is a taut novel of psychological suspense. But more than that, it is a layered exploration of grief: Kara and her sister Kellen hated each other. Kara wants to feel something about her sister's death, even if just so she can be there for her mother. But the frank truth is that she is numb. Kara's story isn't just about saving herself from physical harm. It's also about her attempt to heal her self and to find a connection to her sister, even if it comes tragically late. Grogan's lyrical, intimate exploration of Kara and her mother's loss weaves into the crackling thriller pace—the result? A delectable confection of a book readers will remember long after the final bite.

Praise for FROM WHERE I WATCH YOU

"This powerful debut [will keep readers] guessing until the end, which is shocking as the final details are revealed... a suspenseful and fast-paced read... this novel will do well in YA collections where dark, realistic fiction is in demand."

—School Library Journal

"The story builds and sustains tension deftly, offering just the right level of clues as to the identity of the stalker. Kara's love of baking is a nifty distinguishing feature, and the author includes her cookie recipe at the end. Involving and suspenseful." —Kirkus Reviews

"A mingling of creepy and cautionary—everyone being so caught up in themselves they fail to see what is happening to those closest to them." —VOYA

"Lyrical prose + riveting mystery + mouth-watering baked goods = one of the best books I've read in years. I stayed up too late, creped out and glued to the pages. Shannon's debut marks her as a voice to watch."

—Mandy Hubbard, Author of Prada and Prejudice and Fool Me Twice

"From Where I Watch You is impossible to put down, as addictive as the sugar cookies the main character loves to bake. The story's many ingredients make it uniquely suspenseful, multi-layered, and easy to gobble up. I couldn't stop!"

—Janet Gurtler, bestselling author of I'm Not Her

"I loved Kara's voice. Filled with sweet and spicy characters, From Where I Watch You is a delectable YA thriller."

—Jeanne Ryan, author of NERVE

Shannon Grogan is a second-grade teacher who writes at night (and while her kids are at ballet and baseball) in a small logging town east of Seattle. She holds degrees in education and graphic design/illustration. When she isn't writing, she's baking, reading, watching scary movies, and wishing she were at the beach.
